THE KING OF KINGS

By Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

We saw the motion picture "The King of Kings" while in Detroit. There is much vicious anti-Jewish propaganda in it which is neither necessary nor warranted by the episodes it portrays. Cecil de Mille, its producer, is the son of a Jewish mother, a descendant of one of England's finest Jewish families. He shows his gratitude to and appreciation of his mother and her family in peculiar fashion. The picture has been resented by liberal Christians. It depicts the Nazarene as a miracle worker and not the man of love and peace. If peace on earth, good-will to men is the heart of Christianity's message, the film "The King of Kings" will not disseminate it. We gravely fear it will make for ill-will.

AARON SAPIRO DID IT

A few weeks ago the American Jewish Committee in its report gave the details of Mr. Ford's apology to the Jews. Negotiations for that apology had been carried out through Mr. Louis Marshall, Chairman of the American Jewish Committee. Mr. Ford's agents had endeavoured to negotiate initially through Dr. Stephen S. Wise, but he was abroad at the time, and consequently Mr. Marshall was communicated with. On reading that report, we would gather the impression that the American Jewish Committee deserved all the credit for Mr. Ford's apology. There are some patent errors which the chairman of that committee made in his negotiations. Of these we do not care to speak. The announcement of Mr. Ford's desire to apologize so sudden and startling would have swept all of us off our feet. Mr. Marshall is a most estimable gentleman and one of the truly great personalities in American Jewish life, whom we respect but whom we do not regard infallible. American Jewry may in the Zangwillian phrase be ruled by Marshall law, but Canadian Jewry is yet exempt. Now when the American Jewish Committee through its chairman seems to take for itself the credit for the collapse of the anti-Semitic campaign of the "Dearborn Independent," then we believe it is assuming too much.

What are the facts? Every informed person knows that Aaron Sapiro's insistence that Henry Ford appear in court and face him with his accusations caused Ford to hasten his apology. Aaron Sapiro did it, and not the American Jewish Committee. Aaron Sapiro had appealed to the leaders of American Jewry for aid, but they refused it to him. They were diplomats and feared that the publicity of such a trial would be harmful. They attempted to dissuade Sapiro to desist from his law-suit. But Sapiro did not agree with them. And time has vindicated his judgment. Single-handed, with little assistance and even with the condemnation of many Jews, Aaron Sapiro, an insignificant attorney, challenged the mightiest industrial titan of our age. It was truly another battle between David and Goliath. Aaron Sapiro jeopardized his reputation and life-savings to help his people. His victory is now history. It was a lone victory. It was the triumph of a lone Jewish spirit. There must be prophetic impulses in Sapiro. He asked from Ford no compensation, but his good name and that of his people and he received both. To Aaron Sapiro the Jewish world is indebted, and to Aaron Sapiro belongs the credit of the Ford apology. The American Jewish Committee has done good work for world Jewry, but it is not responsible for Ford's apology.

ANTI-SEMITIC OUTBREAKS IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA

The latest country in East Europe to join the forces of the Jew-baiting is Czecho-Slovakia. At the head of the country is the noted scholar and Jewphile Prof. Masaryk. It is inconceivable that under the regime of this liberal-minded statesman the Jewish population should be subjected to cruelties similar to those perpetrated in Hungary and Roumania. It is therefore to be hoped that the excesses will soon be checked and the guilty ones punished.

ABRAHAM WALLERSTEIN

A humble Jew; simple, kindly, unobtrusive; a dreamer, an idealist; a lover of truth and beauty. To his memory we wish to offer this meagre tribute.

Abraham Wallerstein who suddenly passed away this week was one of the most loveable men we had in this community.

The public at large may not have been aware of his existence. It takes wealth or blatancy to gain prominence in Jewish public life.

Wallerstein was not a man of money. He had no desire to elbow his way to the front where he might be seen and recognized.

But in the limited circles where he moved his exceptional qualities of mind and character could not pass unnoticed and unappreciated.

He was a scholar, possessed of the temperament of the genuine scholar. Slaving long hours at his petty little business, he snatched time from his sleep and rest to read widely and keep in touch with all currents in Jewish and Hebrew literature, and all movements in Jewish life as well as with some branches of natural science. His knowledge of Jewish affairs was broad and profound.

He had definite views on life and on Jewish problems. He aligned himself with the nationalist-radical school of Jewish thought. But he was not intolerant of the opinions and theories of those who held differently. He was a lover of people, steeped in the finest traditions of the warm, pulsating cult of Chassidism. He saw the good in everybody.

It was his character that unfailingly won the admiration of those who came in contact with him. He was simple, unassuming, scrupulously truthful and honest, with the refinement that comes of serving beauty and truth. He was always calm and unruffled like a true philosopher. He possessed the virtues that one attributes to the old-time holy rabbis and sages.

The Jewish labour-nationalist element has lost in Mr. Wallerstein a valued member, guide and sage. The Jewish community at large has lost a beautiful personality to whom one could always point as a fine example of the best Jewish traditions of manhood. A.B.B.

The ceremony took place in the hotel ball room, which was decorated with palms, potted ferns and southern smilax, interwoven on the chandeliers and the balcony. As the bridal procession came down the aisle, which was bordered on either side with graduated horn baskets of Columbia roses tied with white ribbons, Leo J. Neumann, brother of the bride, and Frank Redlich played the Lohengrin wedding march. The maid-of-honour, Miss Marjorie Neumann, sister of the bride, wore yellow georgette with lower bodice of silver and an overdress of green net flounces edged in silver, with shoes to match. She carried an arm bouquet of Columbia roses. Ben Singer, brother of the groom, was best man. Davaar Apartments, Van Horne and Davaar Avenue

Owner and Builder: B. Kaplan

Architect: U. T. Benoit

THESE apartments, which are now ready for occupation, offer the most modern ideas in buildings. Ideally located, they are far from the roar and tumult of passing traffic, yet close to an excellent street car service. The building is fire-proof—and in an exclusive part of Outremont. The apartments are each of five bright and spacious rooms. The main entrance hall is of marble, enhanced by beautifully decorated walls, and especially designed fixtures. The lobbies are large, and ornamented in charming effects that blend with the marble staircase which leads to the upper floors. The telephone system to the apartments and to the janitor is a new installation device.

Each apartment has a private foyer with a large window and a clothes cupboard that is well adapted for guests. Throughout each apartment the electric fixtures match the decorative scheme. There are one and two balconies with each suite of rooms, ample closet space, well arranged linen closets, numerous service plugs in every room, and labour-saving devices of all kinds. The living-room is spacious and finished in solid mahogany. The fire-place is of decorative travatine. There are large windows, that lead to a lovely view. Attractive wall brackets add to the beauty.

The dining-room and hall are finished in walnut, the two bedrooms in an ivory tint. The papering will be to suit the taste of the individual.

The bath-rooms are tiled, with showers and set in tubs, medicine cabinets, flushometer toilets and plugs for hair tongs, etc.

The large bright kitchens are most modern and a delight to any woman. Large windows, ironing boards, broom chests, incinerators, a large white metal duco finish pantry (with window) equipped with plenty of shelves, Frigidaire, drying racks, leaded glass windows, stationary tubs, and plugs for toaster, irons, etc., make these kitchens most efficient and cheerful. There is twenty-four-hour janitor service, a well-equipped clothes line on the roof, washing and drying room in the cellar, locker rooms in the basement, and a fine service entrance that is tiled and well arranged with convenient bells for each apartment.

These are apartments you will be glad to point to as your own. They may be seen by appointment—phone Bel. 3456, or 3457, or by calling at the premises at Van Horne and Davaar Avenue.

Although the suites are highly attractive the rents are decidedly reasonable.

THE RABBINATE IN CANADA

Canadian Jewry is in need of a scholarly and dynamic Jewish ministry. It needs rabbis who will re-create and mould Jewish life. Spiritual leaders who will lead and not be led. Too many rabbis have permitted their sacred offices to be reduced to a mere "burying and marrying business." The rabbi in Israel is not a priest. His unique function has always been that of student, sage, teacher and communal leader.

We often meet with the university-type of Jewish youths, who hunger for spiritual guidance. They yearn for fellowship from the rabbinate, but the Canadian rabbis are continually busy "officiating."

There are huge Jewish communal enterprises to be undertaken. The rabbis lead not! They wait for the laity! And whatever communal institutions came into existence in the past—these were not brought about by rabbinic leadership, but by lay-vision. In fact, on many Jewish institutional executive boards, the names of rabbis, who ministered for years in Canada, are missing. Intelligent Canadian Jewry ought not to be satisfied with such a state of affairs in the Canadian rabbinate. It must demand of its rabbis—Jewish leadership. The rabbi ought not to become a mere "toy" in the hand of a Jewish "goy!"

OSCAR STRAUS

Cyrus Adler has a remarkable biographical sketch of the late Oscar Straus in the American Year Book for 1927-1928. We recommend this essay to all our readers who seek inspiration. We suggest that fathers read it to their sons.

In Oscar Straus, we had a great Jew and American. "No Jew in America ever had so full and rounded out public life as Oscar Straus, and naturally much of this was spent in the larger world, but he was not one of those who felt at any time that his public career demanded severance from his Jewish tradition. He was a loyal member of the synagogue." Dr. Adler tells us that when Straus came to Washington as a member of the Cabinet and took up his abode in the beautiful Venetian palace, he came as on a serious matter of consultation to a friend and said, "Every time I moved into a house my father placed the mezuzah on the doorpost." He asked this friend to take his father's place. This story indeed reveals Oscar Straus's attitude as a Jew. The life of Straus ought to serve as a great inspiration to any Jewish youth.

LOUIS MARSHALL AND JEWISH EDUCATION

Louis Marshall is the greatest and most outstanding layman in all America. When he speaks, American Jewry listens attentively, and here is what he said at the dinner of the Jewish Education Association: "The man of spirit and learning has always been the Jewish ideal. The Ghetto of old had been the preserver of Judaism. The gilded Ghetto of to-day was threatening its destruction. The Jews of America must rouse themselves to the danger and labour for their self-preservation."

RITUAL MURDER CHARGE IN POLAND

The Warsaw courts had to deal with several cases of inciting to riot recently, as growing out of anti-Jewish riots in the town of Dobrzyn, where a little girl, who had been lost, was found dead. The news immediately spread throughout the town that a ritual murder had been committed by the Jews and it was necessary to call in a squadron of soldiers from the neighbouring town of Plock in order to preserve order. The circuit doctor, who examined the corpse, announced that there was no doubt in his mind that a ritual murder was involved in the case and he put his official seal to the statement. It was, however, later established that the child was killed as a result of falling from a wall. The rioters were given three months at hard labour.

THE STORY OF CHANUKAH

(Translation from the Hebrew)

By Isaac Shieser, age fourteen, of the Bialick Boys

Antiochus Epiphanes was the King of Greece. He ruled over many countries including Judaea. At one time there formed a community of sinners among the Jews. They did not observe any of the Jewish rites. When Antiochus heard of this he thought he might as well make all the Jews become Gentiles. He sent a large army to Judaea and at the point of the sword forced many to become Gentiles.

He went into the temple and sacrificed pigs and other unclean animals upon the altars. There was a family called Maccabaeus, a father and five sons, John, Simon, Judas, Eleazer, Apphus. Judas was more of a warrior than a scholar and he and his brothers formed an army of picked men and after many fierce battles forced Antiochus and his army to leave Judaea.

They then set about to cleanse the temple of the sacrileges which the Greeks had committed. When all was clean and they were ready to light the Nair Tamid they found only enough pure oil to burn one day and to manufacture new oil requires eight days. They kindled the oil and lol and behold it burned for eight days, giving the priests time to prepare new oil. Then Judas and his brothers and all the congregation of Israel ordained that every year beginning with twenty-five of Chislev for eight days lights should be kindled in every house to commemorate this time.

JEHUDAH HALEVI—(1086-1146)

By Zelma B. Garfinkel, age fifteen, of Sarah Circle, Freda Shieser, Leader

In Palestine a slim figure of a man was seen gazing on the ancient City of Jerusalem. As he gazed he became extremely sad. From his eyes there glowed the light of a saint. The pale forehead and long lines of his face revealed him as a poet and thinker. At the sight of the Holy City he seemed to be moved with a powerful emotion, as the subject of all his finest poetry was the Holy City.

Suddenly from behind, a gaunt, stern Bedouin appeared on horse back. His eyes rested on a strange figure whose dress and manner marked him of a most hated race of Europe "The Jew." He at full force urged the steed forward and struck the old man with his lance. The Bedouin rode off to join his tribe leaving on the ground the old Jew dead who was Jehudah Halevi. Here was one of the greatest men gone and the greatest poet.

He lived in Spain, at the age of ten, when the first crusade was starting in Italy, France and Germany. He was sent to the College of Alfasi, the great Talmudic scholar. He studied a great deal, but soon became bored with the dry Talmudic studies which resulted in him putting aside his books and he started to write little poems. Like most poets Jehudah was not indifferent to feminine charms. He was sentimental enought to fall in love. As he grew older he became serious and he was not only a great poet, but a very brilliant philospher. He wrote a book "Hakuzari" containing his ideas on German Judaism.

When Jehudah Halevi declared his intention of becoming the first Haluz the Jews were astonished, and many of his friend reminded him that he was no longer a young man.

From Granada he sailed for Alexandria; on his arrival he was greeted by the wealthiest Jews in the country and by the daughters of Israel. Their loveliness brought back the memories of his youth and so moved him to sing again a last song of love.

"Wondrous is this land to see,
With perfume its meadows laden,
But more fair than all to me,
Is yon slender, gentle maiden,
Ah, Time's swift flight I fain would stay,
Forgetting that my locks are grey.

He stayed three months in Alexandria and then resumed his journey to Tyre and Damascus. Some say that in the latter place he wrote his famous "Zionide."

Soon he became grey, old and feeble and his whole life was a beautiful national poem.

HELLENISTIC CUSTOMS PRECEDING THE MACCABEAN REVOLT

By Mesulam Littner, age sixteen, of Bealik Circle

Several years before the rise of the Maccabees, a strange sight would have met the gaze of a person of the present day. At that time an imitation of the famous Olympian games was in progress and the high priest who had recently purchased his office, could be seen leaving the temple, in the midst of the ceremonies to attend them. He was elaborately dressed in the height of Greek fashion, as were his attendants and aides, and as he strode proudly towards the Pantheon, one could easily see that in outward appearance he resembled a Greek almost to perfection. It was Jason, the high priest.

After the athletes had given an exhibition of running and jumping, and the winners had been crowned with laurel wreaths, Jason returned home with Cleon, his Greek art connoisseur, in attendance. Giving his cloak to a servant, the priest entered his living-room and sat down on a chair. The room was furnished handsomely in the latest Greek taste. On a cupboard that was built in the wall were large drinking goblets that bore reliefs of the adventures of Hercules and the battles of other Greek heroes known well in legend, while conspicuous among the pictures and book-lined walls, was a quite large statue of the "Dying Gladiator," the work of a famous sculptor. One would think that he was in the centre of ancient Greece, so wholly was he surrounded by evidences of Greek taste and culture. But this was not all. The people who inhabited the City of Jerusalem at that time, were Hebrew only by heritage, and had even changed the names given to them at birth. Jason, the high priest, who had formerly and legally been named Joshua, but, owing to the inadvisability of having a name that was not Greek, and exhibiting before his Grecian friends any trace of his ancestry, he had changed it to Jason. Other notable examples are evident. Menander had formerly been Micah and many were given the name of John at their birth. There was a vast difference between this present priest and the one that had preceded him. One, as vivid as the difference between a pitch-black night and a sunny, clear day.

Before the high priest was a model of the life led by the Hebrews. Studious to the extreme, a follower and maintainer of the law, he was a wonderful champion and leader of the Lord's religion. It was he who made sacrifices to their God, led in prayer and kept that spark of Judaism alive in their hearts. But, now, this new priest, who advocated Greek manner of living and worship, blasphemed the prayer of God, and defiled the Temple by placing in it and worshipping the Gods of Heathen, was indeed different. He robbed the holy building of its golden trophies, and for them substituted ones of gilded lead. He bled the people of their money to pay for his sallies on Greek culture, and he even encouraged them to leave their religion, by means of his "Feasts for the Gods," and his idolatrous practises. Few were there in that polluted land who dared resist the advances of the foreign religion.

This was the situation in which the Jews were placed several years before their heroic struggle for freedom.

THE POLITICAL EMANCIPATION OF THE JEWS IN ENGLAND

By Evelyn Greenbaum, age sixteen and a half, of Nordia Girls, Dr. M. Zimmerman, Leader

The history of the Jews in England since the resettlement in the middle of the seventeenth century is the development from a trading body of aliens, domiciled in England to one of the many elements of which the British Empire is composed.

The Jews in England did not have to battle against the anti-Jewish legislation as the case on the continent, but the Christian character of the English state prevented the incorporation of the Jews into the body politic. The disabilities which were thereby created, rendered necessary a lengthy struggle to bring about the enfranchisement of the British Jews.

In 1753 a Jewish Naturalization Bill was passed, both in the House of Lords and the House of Commons, but this created such agitation that it was repealed in the following year. With this the emancipation of the Jews was delayed indefinitely. Even more than on the continent, the intellectual and social had preceded the political emancipation of the Jews and increased the discontent and impatience of those, who yearned to shine in the larger life of the nation. The Jewish community nevertheless increased in number and influence, and the demand for civic rights thus became only more urgent.

In 1833, a bill for the removal of Jewish disabilities was passed by the House of Commons, but was rejected by the House of Lords. Meanwhile relief was obtained by the repeal of disabilities connected with municipal life. David Salamons was in 1835 elected sheriff of London. Admission to Parliament was still banned by the Christian Oath of Allegiance.

To force events, the City of London elected in 1847 Baron de Rothschild, a member of Parliament, but he could not take the seat, although re-elected in 1850.

In 1851, David Salamons, on being elected for Greenwich, took the bolder course of voting and speaking in the House. He was, nevertheless obliged to withdraw and to pay a fine of £500 for each of the three times he had sat in the House.

It was only in 1858 that, as a compromise between the Upper and Lower Houses, it was decided that the oath could be modified and under such a resolution that Baron de Rothschild, as the first professing Jew, entered Parliament in that year. In 1860, the Parliament oath for both Houses was permanently amended, and in 1885, Sir Nathan Mayer de Rothschild took, under the title of Lord Rothschild, his seat in the House of Lords as the first Jewish peer.

All offices are now open to Jews in the British Empire, where a number of them have risen to highest positions, including the vice-royalty of India, occupied by the Earl of Reading.

THE RELATION OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION TO THE EMANCIPATION OF THE JEW IN EUROPE

By Ethel Cross, age seventeen, of Nordia Girls

The beginning of the civil emancipation of Jewry in Western Europe late in the eighteenth century was part of the general movement of national and social forces. Until then the Jews had lived everywhere set apart in their Ghettos either actively or passively shunned; considered as aliens with no civil rights, and also as religious outcasts with no human rights. The Renaissance of the sixteenth century which brought to birth the nationalism of Europe in conflict with the imperialism of Catholic Rome, did so on a racial basis and therefore only embittered the feeling against the Jews. The Jews were not permitted to leave medievalism and their Ghettos until after the French Revolution. The eighteenth century's ideas of freedom and of "the rights of man" were a revolt against personal privilege within the state including race privilege. The ruling class in most nations belonged to a ruling race; the race which at one time had conquered and subjected the population. Hence eighteenth century liberalism first raised the ideal which all civilized nations have since accepted; That citizenship and not race is the basis of national unity.

In the effort to obliterate race distinctions within the democracy in the only form in which they were not respected. The ideal of the rights of small nations had not yet emerged and civil and individual rights were granted on the basis of "the equality of man" within the nation. The universalism or cosmopolitanism then preached was a form of self-deception, was in fact a means of solidifying the new conglomerate democratic nations.

To be consistent eighteenth century liberal Europe had to emancipate the Jews. The Jews had been deprived of both their national and their personal rights when it seemed possible to them to obtain their personal rights under conditions which appealed to their democratic nature, they either failed to see or were willing to accept the danger to their national existence. The opportunity of western enlightenment, of decent living and of political freedom could not be refused.

IRAQ TO CONTINUE UNDER BRITISH RULE

A treaty entered into between the Covernment of Great Britain and King Feisal of Iraq, by which the British mandate over that territory is to continue in effect until 1932, was signed in London last week. The Arabs of Iraq were anxious to have the mandate expire next year, but the British authorities succeeded in having the compact continue yet for five years.

The most important issue in this pact is the question of the exploitation of the Iraq oil wells for the consumption of the Western world. Syrian sympathizers wish to have pipes drawn from Iraq to Alexandretto, the Syrian seaport, so that the oil might be shipped from there to Europe, while British interests are anxious to have the pipes drawn to Haifa, where the new harbour is soon to be constructed out of the Palestine loan which was recently floated. The Palestine administration as well as the Jews of Haifa are naturally desirous to see the new port of Haifa becoming the chief port of export for that valuable product. This would greatly assist in the industrial development of the northern part of Palestine. The continuation of the British mandate of Iraq practically assures the carrying out of the new scheme.

In both the House of Lords and the House of Commons the reported grant of the Dead Sea concessions formed the subject of inquiry and discussion. In his reply, Mr. Ormesby-Gore said that four applications were received and that it was decided in principle to grant a concession to Major Tulloch and Mr. Novomeysky based on their offer, provided that suitable terms and conditions could be agreed upon with them and that they furnish satisfactory financial guarantees. There was no proposal that the British Government should obtain a controlling interest by the purchase of shares in the concessionary company. Similar answers were given by Lord Lovat, Under-Secretary for Dominion Affairs in the House of Lords.

It was reported last week that the Rothschild London house is behind Engineer Novomeysky in the undertaking and that Baron Edmond de Rothschild, of Paris, is prepared to extend financial aid to the enterprise.

Editorial displeasure has been voiced in a number of American Jewish papers over a report in the Detroit News of a party given by the Hebrew Infant's Orphan Home. The item read in part: "Chanukah, or the Jewish feast of the Maccabees, has in recent years assumed a spirit similar to that of Christmas. So we brought Santa Claus to distribute the Chanukah gifts to the children." Individual displeasure on the part of Jewish readers must have been voiced, too. Not because of the charge in the report but because it was published in the paper. These things are regrettable, of course.

Santa Claus is no longer a stranger to Jewish children, they cry for him and usually get him but it shouldn't appear in the paper. The Jew who keeps a kosher house and shivers at the smell of ham but rides down town on Shabbas to see what there is to buy in the big stores would rather not talk about the Chanukah party the children had on Christmas when Santy Claus gave them their Yuletide presents. If you must talk too much call the fellow in the red suit a Chanukah man and the tree—well, just say tree, nu. However, if this is good enough for grown-ups it doesn't go down with the children. There are plenty in Canada this week who have had more parties lately than they ever do and they call the parties by their right name. They aren't trained in hypocrisy yet. The parents may say, "Here comes the Chanukah man, children." But when the children go home they wave good-bye to Santy Claus and wonder how parents get that way for goodness sake.

Why not clear up the subject? Essentially Christmas is for the Christians only. It is a religious holiday celebrating the birth of Christ. The Jews have suffered terribly in the name of Christ and recoil from the thought of celebrating his birth. But Christmas time is also becoming as non-sectarian as New Year. It is the international day for giving and getting presents and there is nothing religious about this phase of it. The Christians, some of them, feel sanctified at Christmas time. That many of them don't feel religious at all at present-exchanging season is just a suspicion but Jews have nothing to do with that any more than Christians should be worried about the state of a Jew's soul on Yom Kippur.

Just because a Jewish child has a Christmas party does not mean that the Jewish religion is going straight to the dogs or that the existence of Israel is threatened with extinction. A Christmas tree in a Jewish home has no more to do with religion than a sickening New Year's orgy has. Its only function is to please and delight the children at a time when all other children are being pleased and delighted. A Chanukah party can be just as lovely, yes, but then how about Christmas when the whole rest of the world is occupied with holiday spirit and gayety? One holy day need not intrude upon the other. They mean entirely different things. Leave the religious observance of Christmas to the believing Christian, by all means. Stress the religious significance of Chanukah for Jews, by all means. What have either of these to do with pure, innocent fun?

* * *

Speaking of Christmas parties the Jewish community of Toronto is indebted to J. Middleton's Jr's. class of young men of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church at the Scott Institute, 165 Elizabeth Street, for being Santy Claus to about 150 Jewish children last week. The hall was packed to capacity with the parents of the children and friends, so the papers said, and the children gave a sacred cantata, "The Vision Eternal." Scott Institute, by the way, is under the supervision of one Rev. Morris Zeidman for the Home Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church in Canada and it was very nice of the boys to think of giving a party for poor little Jewish children. Poor little Jewish children don't have Christmas parties so they are much easier to get as guests than other kinds of little Jewish children. It was a mitzvah to take these youngsters in out of the cold and give them bright lights, entertainment and goodies and they must have had a high old time.

But one thing was most rude and in very poor taste and that was the business of trying to make converts with a bag of candy in one hand and the New Testament in the other. Besides the bad manners such a party puts forward it is distressing to think that even one member of Mr. Middleton's class might seriously believe that Christmas tree converts ever stay put. Any normal Jewish child is smart enough to enjoy a good time and then take his orange and his toy home and not be converted at all. Poor and underfed, joyless in the midst of holiday buzz, who could blame him for going into a mission to see what it's all about?

Only a regular fuss-budget of a Jew might fear that the Christmas party children may become Christian. Jews aren't weaned away from Judaism to anything until they have some money and spare time. The only dark aspect to the incident is the sorrow people may feel at all that good Presbyterian money intended mainly for conversion going to waste when it could be spent so splendidly in mining stocks or betting on the horses or for creme de cocoa or violets in spring or on any of the pursuits or luxuries or beautiful objects that give colour and zest to life.

Christmas Banquet to Employers and Staff of Toronto Wet Wash, Limited

After the completion of the largest week's work in the history of the firm, the force of the Toronto Wet Wash Laundry sat down to enjoy a banquet planned annually by the employees and which takes place in their workroom.

The plant was spick and span in its every-day neatness, clean as a whistle, the workroom looked the part and the plant was gayly decorated with bunting, sprays of cedar, laden Christmas tree and turkeys.

As each Christmas looms up on the horizon more space must be given for the banquet and the ever increasing staff. Even with the spacious new addition the space has proven insufficient. The large staff is necessitated through a rapidly growing business and thousands of satisfied customers. The firm is proud of their force of well-trained, efficient workers who meet the heavy daily demand of the public and nothing seems too great for them in the line of business. Many of their employees have been with the firm since its infancy. Mrs. Catharine Ryan is the oldest employee who started in the early days, thirteen years ago.

A lively programme had been arranged. The headliner, Fred King, is noted for his whistling and skill of rendering sweet music on the saw with the use of a violin bow. Fred Judd gave a selection on the harmonica, accompanied by Mr. King, whistling. Even dear old St. Nick in all his special glory and array added to the scene and Charley Chaplin as large as life was also present.

After the banquet Mr. Hoegg, on behalf of the staff, presented Mr. Henning, the president, with an Old English hammered brass fire screen and a solid walnut and needlepoint fender bench. Mr. Hoegg, secretary-treasurer, received an electric heater and a set of fire-irons. Mr. Benish, production manager, was the recipient of a chest of silver; Mr. Harris, assistant superintendent, a silver tea service. Mr. Judd, foreman, a junior bridge lamp. Each of the two hundred employees received a turkey from the firm.

Mrs. E. Goldberg is visiting with her sister, Mrs. A. Prussin, of Detroit.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Rosenthal, of Paris, visited with Mr. and Mrs. A. Weinstein, Proctor Boulevard.

Miss Doris Rosenfeld is visiting friends in Jamestown, N.Y., and Erie, Pa.

Among those who celebrated New Year's eve were: Mr. and Mrs. M. Levy, Mr. and Mrs. L. Mack, Mr. and Mrs. H. Langor, Mr. and Mrs. E. Goldberg, Joseph Sweet, Mr. and Mrs. M. Beube.

At the 2,600-foot level, 230 feet west of where the crosscut intercepted the vein on this level, a round of shot exposed the richest ore yet found on this property.

Another most encouraging development is the fact that the width of the vein at this point is considerably wider than at the point where the drift was started.

Average widths of ore as followed by the drifts on the 2,600-foot level averages better than 15 feet, with average values close to $35.00 per ton.

We recommend the immediate purchase of these shares.

NORTHERN ONTARIO CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, minerals, water, power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

The glory for that belongs to Sapiro. And we regret that its report of the case did not contain a resolution of thanks and approval to him. But what the American Jewish Committee failed to do officially, the Jewish masses of America will do and are doing unofficially. They appreciate what this courageous lawyer, a graduate of the Hebrew Union College, has done for the cause of Judaism—and Jews know how to express their gratitude.

PARENTHOOD AN ART

Physically most men and women are qualified for parenthood. In the past we have assumed that to every couple to whom children are born, there comes spontaneously like manna from the heavens the knowledge of how properly to rear them. To-day, that assumption cannot be maintained. The rearing of children is recognized to be an art, which like every art must be studied and cultivated. Alert parents will seek to inform themselves on how best to bring up their children. They will not take refuge in the formulae of the past. Splendid men and women have carefully observed children, and their observations have been and are being made available. Parents who want to be fair to their children will seek to possess all the new knowledge on child training, that their children might have the best of environment. The American Child Study publishes a magazine monthly. The subscription to that magazine is $1 per year. It can be gotten by writing to The Child Study Association, 509 West 121st Street, New York City. We get no rake-off for this, but we recommend it to all parents. Parenthood is an art, of which every father and mother should be a master.
